CLEAN WATERWAYS OVERVIEW

The CLEAN WATERWAYS Conference brings together government agencies, environmental experts, and industry professionals from maritime, rail, pipeline, and facilities involved in incident prevention and response in the inland environment. This is your opportunity to join this targeted group of attendees to build critical relationships, source new services and technologies, and gain valuable insights on challenges specific to prevention, preparedness, and response in inland waterways.

Key topics being covered this year include challenges and complexities associated with response planning across borders, relationship building prior to and during an emergency, communicating to stakeholders, battery response, interagency coordination, firefighting operations, non-traditional oils and much more! In addition to the high-caliber conference content, the intimate nature of the event delivers an environment designed to cultivate connections and relationships through enhanced networking functions in the exhibit hall.

NEED MORE REASONS TO ATTEND?

- Conference sessions cover practical information on incident prevention and response challenges specific to inland waterways in the U.S. and Canada. You will gain valuable insights on topics specific to response in the inland environment from multiple perspectives, including regulators, industry professionals, consultants, and environmental experts.
- Abundant opportunities to network with your peers away from the stressful challenges of a response and build important relationships with those you may work with during a future emergency.
- Navigate the intimate show floor to source technologies, equipment, and services for preventing, preparing for, and responding to oil spills and other environmental incidents.

1A: The GIS Technology Wave...Surf's Up!

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 10 • 11:00 AM - 12:30 PM

As James O'Brien said, "There is not one right way to ride a wave". Various forms of technology are rolling-in, catching the right ones and making them your own are key to maximizing the benefits to your preparedness and response program. GIS technology provides an excellent opportunity for custom development of mapping data for both preparedness activities and response operations. Advances in cloud-based applications allows for greater flexibility and sharing of GIS Data, and Multi-Factor Authentication (MFA) provides secure access to external Response Partners. What are you waiting for? Ride the Wave! Topics for discussion include customized GIS applications, flexibility in design, development time, challenges, and benefits of rolling-out GIS applications, both internally and externally. Speakers will demonstrate GIS response tools and discuss real experiences using them for preparedness activities, exercises, and response operations. Attendees are encouraged to share their advancements with GIS or other technologies during the Q&A session. Board wax will not be provided!

Chair/Moderator: Dan Barghshoon, Emergency Management Technical Specialist, Canada Energy Regulator

Applying GIS to Tactical Planning and Real-Time Response Mapping...with Drones!

Jon Wickersham, Emergency Response Program Specialist, Colonial Pipeline Company

Lauren Pillow, GIS/Data Projects Administrator, Pollution Response & Emergency Preparedness, Virginia Department of Environmental Quality

2A: All Eyes on Us! - Managing Expectations in a Changing Response Landscape

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 10 • 11:00 AM - 12:30 PM

Evolving socio-political environments have put the response industry under a new microscope. Challenges related to environmental justice, sensitive receptors, established response techniques and technologies, analytical methods and interpretations affect traditional approaches to mitigating risks to workers, communities, and the environment. Operators and responders must be aware of how these challenges affect the response landscape.

Chair/Moderator: Paul Nony, PhD, CIH, CSP, Senior Vice President and Principal Toxicologist, CTEH, LLC.

PANELISTS:

- Kevin Eichinger, Federal On-Scene Coordinator, U.S. EPA, Region 4
- Patrick Brady, CIH, CSP, General Director Hazardous Materials Safety, BNSF Railway
- Michael Sobel, Senior Project Manager, Antea Group
- Johnny Mitchell, Chief Technology Officer, Pace Analytical Services, LLC

Kick-off Lunch in the Exhibit Hall

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 10 • 12:30 PM - 1:30 PM

Enjoy lunch in the exhibit hall and spend time connecting with your fellow attendees. You just might make an invaluable connection over lunch!

1B: To Communicate or Not to Communicate? That's the Question - Crisis Communication Best Practices

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 10 • 1:30 PM - 3:00 PM

Communicating to stakeholders (community, media, agencies) before, during, and after a response can make or break public perception. Hear best practices, and gain knowledge from a panel of experts who focus on building open communications and solid relationships for emergency response.

Chair/Moderator: Erika Lamberth, Sr. Consultant, Crisis Communications, The Response Group

PANELISTS:

- Peter Knudson, Deputy Director, National Transportation Safety Board
- Chris Sims, Corporate & Government Relations, Central Region, Shell USA
- Travis Hallam, Director, Three Affiliated Tribes Pipeline Authority
- Paul Rhynard, Managing Partner, COO, Shawn Douglas Communication

2B: All Charged Up: Batteries from Response to Clean-Up

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 10 • 1:30 PM - 3:00 PM

Speakers in this session will discuss battery response from varying perspectives. Perspectives included will be responder areas of concern and best practices, environmental concerns, clean-up, the management of damaged, defected, recalled (DDR) batteries and the regulations that govern them.

1D: Why We Do It-Regional Planning*THURSDAY, APRIL 11 • 8:30 AM - 10:00 AM

Regional planning is a must since spill and/or hazmat events know no boundaries. Changes are high that overlapping agencies will respond to a singular event. The discussion in this session will focus on how those agencies can preplan, adapt and/or work together with other agencies who share oversight on an incident that crosses jurisdictional lines such as a river that flows from one state to another. Oil spills and hazmat incidents know no boundaries and changes are high that response jurisdictions will be crossed with overlapping agencies responding to a singular event. The discussion in this session will focus on the area planning process before "The Big One" hits. Agencies from all levels of government work together to preplan, adapt and work together with other agencies who share response authority on an incident that can cross jurisdictional lines from an air plume that migrates from one county to the next or an oil spill that flows down river from one state to the next. The presentations will be followed by a panel discussion on how responses evolve from local to state to federal based on a 2017 barge incident which released liquid fertilizer into the Ohio River.

2F: Crossing the Line: Interagency Response on Inland Waterways

THURSDAY, APRIL 11 • 1:00 PM - 2:30 PM

Interagency coordination is essential to spill preparedness and response along the inland waterways. The intricate rivers, lakes and streams touch multiple local, states and federal jurisdictions, generating the need for multi-agency contingency planning and response operations. These cross-jurisdictional responses are dynamic and complex and can often create confusion and misunderstanding of authorities, responsibilities, and jurisdictions. Speakers in this session provide clarity on state and federal agencies jurisdictional roles and responsibilities and will also offer valuable lessons learned from past case studies involving interagency coordination and response operations on the inland waterways.
